

Withdrawing from YSJ

Part-time students

If you are thinking about withdrawing from university, there are financial implications to be aware of. The actual costs will differ depending on your individual circumstances and at which point in the year you withdraw, please see below for more information.

Do I have to repay back any bursaries I have received from YSJ?

If you are eligible for the Aspire Scheme your account will be suspended and you will no longer have access to the funds. For bursaries and scholarships, the university will be in contact with you in regards to any under / overpayments. If you are receiving any other funding from the University or any external agency, please contact them direct for advice.

Do I have to repay back my loans?

If you withdraw from your course Student Finance will reassess the funding you have received. Your loan entitlement will be recalculated based on your period of attendance until you withdrew, the university will use your last date of attendance as your withdrawal date and inform Student Finance of this.

If any of your loan covers the period after you've left your course, this counts as an overpayment and you'll need to repay it straight away

Once you have been reassessed, the Student Loans Company will send you a letter to confirm any overpayments and when these need to be repaid. If you need to make any repayments straight away you will need to contact them to arrange to repay this in a way which is affordable for you.

For further information on withdrawing and the implications, please visit our Withdrawal webpage.

Future Study

If you go back to university after studying previously this can affect your student finance. The number of years that you can get student finance is normally calculated as:

Length of current course + 1 year - number of years of previous study = funding years remaining

Even if you only attended a course for a short time, it will count as a year of previous study.

If you have Compelling Personal Reasons (CPR) as to why you are withdrawing from university, such as illness, you can write a letter of Compelling Personal Reasons to Student Finance so that the year in question does not count when they are calculating the funding years that you have remaining.

For more information on this, please visit Going back to uni or repeating a year

NHS (LSF) Students

The University will inform the NHS Learning Support Fund of your change in attendance; however, you should also contact the NHS Learning Support Fund (NHS LSF) helpline as soon as possible on 0300 330 0521 to enable them to stop any further payments. The NHS will then work out if you are owed any payments and contact you to advise.

Please note: if you leave your course before the 31st August and you have been in receipt of the NHS Training Grant, you will be in an overpayment situation because the Grant is assessed up until this date.

Further Information

If you need more information or your circumstances aren't covered here, you can contact Student Finance on 0300 100 0607 between 8am and 8pm, Monday to Friday and Saturday between 9am and 4pm. Alternatively, you can chat with an adviser via webchat on your online account, Monday to Friday between 9am and 5.30pm.
